American companies manufacture enough bullets each year to fire 31 rounds into every one of our citizens.

How many more mass-murders will it take to get Congress to pass sensible gun regulation?

Guns end the lives of seven children and teens every day in America.

Ask yourself if this is really what we as Americans meant by putting our children first?

Guns killed more preschoolers in one year than they did law-enforcement officers in the line of duty.
America’s military and law-enforcement agencies have four million guns.

Our citizens have 310 million.

Every illegal gun on our nation's streets increases the odds that our children could be killed by gun violence.
The number of children and teens killed by guns in one year would fill 126 classrooms of 20 students each.

Too many children are still being killed or injured by gun violence. Isn’t it time to demand more common sense ways to protect them?
