Welcome to the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths® Celebration

Thank you for your interest in the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths® Celebration. Whether you are ready to start planning right away or are just beginning to learn about the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths, this section is a great place to start. In this section you will find:

- Welcome to the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths, an overview that explains what the Children’s Sabbath is and answers frequently asked questions.
- Examples of past Children’s Sabbaths celebrations which will give you a glimpse of the varied and inspiring ways that places of worship bring their concern, commitment and creativity to planning Children’s Sabbaths.
- Fact Sheets on Child Poverty, Gun Violence, and Family Separations at the Border.
A Letter from Marian Wright Edelman

Dear Faithful Friend of Children,

Thank you for your interest in joining in the 27th annual National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths, “Realizing Dr. King’s Vision for Every Child: Lives of Hope, Not Despair” as we connect nationwide, across religious traditions, generations, race, ethnicity, income, and geography to lift a united, faithful voice and inspire year-round faithful action to end child poverty, protect all children from gun violence, and end the heartless separation of children from families at the border.

We celebrate this Children’s Sabbath fifty years after Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. announced the Poor People’s Campaign, an idea I was blessed to share with him from Robert Kennedy and one that I and many others helped carry on after both their assassinations over the past half century and will continue. The last years of Dr. King’s life were extraordinarily difficult as he called for an end not only to racism but also to poverty and violence.

In his final Sunday sermon, “Remaining Awake Through a Great Revolution,” Dr. King named four great challenges: “First, we are challenged to develop a world perspective...to make [the world] one in terms of brotherhood;” “Secondly, we are challenged to eradicate the last vestiges of racial injustice from our nation;” Third, “We are challenged to rid our nation and the world of poverty;” and Fourth, “we must find an alternative to war and bloodshed.” In this and other sermons, Dr. King named the evils of racism, materialism, and militarism, connecting the justice imperatives to end racism, poverty, and war and other violence and proclaiming that we can’t be concerned about one without addressing the others.

Dr. King concluded his last Sunday sermon: “Let me close by saying that we have difficult days ahead in the struggle for justice and peace, but I will not yield to a politic of despair. I’m going to maintain hope as we come to Washington in this [Poor People’s] campaign. The cards are stacked against us. This time we will really confront a Goliath. God grant that we will be that David of truth set out against the Goliath of injustice, the Goliath of neglect, the Goliath of refusing to deal with the problems, and go on with the determination to make America the truly great America that it is called to be...We shall overcome because the arc of a moral universe is long, but it bends toward justice....With this faith we will be able to hew out of the mountain of despair the stone of hope. With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood [and sisterhood]."
Fifty years later, we are in the midst of grimmer, more devastating, more terrible days than many of us hoped and thought we would ever see again. What would Dr. King say of our nation today in which over 13 million children still live in poverty in our rich nation? What would he say of our nation today when families fleeing to us in search of safe haven are instead ripped apart heartlessly? What would he say of our nation that protects the right to bear arms at the expense of children’s right to bear dreams and of lives safe from gun violence?

Many are driven to despair by assaults on children and family well-being—including rampant and resurgent racism; the devastations of poverty while tax changes gift the rich at the expense of millions of the poor left behind; the daily, deadly toll of gun violence through suicide, homicide, and accidents; and the heartless ripping of children from the arms of parents seeking refuge in our country. But this time demands that we persist in hope, not despair, and fight with all our nonviolent might until justice is won.

Freedom and justice are not negotiable to people who truly seek to honor God. No child should suffer poverty, gun violence, or be torn from the loving arms of family. God did not make two classes of children and values each child as God’s own sacred gift regardless of race, ethnicity, religion, gender identity, sexuality, or national origin. All children deserve lives of hope, not despair. I share this prayer to the God of All Children and hope together we will help our nation and administration discover a sense of moral decency and respect the sacredness of every child. Working together, we have the capacity to overcome injustice. On Children’s Sabbath weekend and throughout the year to come, let us summon the inspiration, information, and determination to do so, working as long and hard as it takes until we love, respect, protect, and welcome all children.

A Prayer to the God of All Children

O God of the children of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Mexico, of Myanmar, Syria
Of Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Israel, Iran, Iraq, Libya and Yemen
Of Nigeria, Sudan, South Africa and South Carolina,
Of Rohingya and Palestinian children and refugee children everywhere without a safe country or space to welcome them,
Help us to love and respect and protect and welcome them all.

O God of Black and Brown and White and Albino children and those all mixed together
Of children who are rich and poor and in between
Of children who speak English and Russian and Hmong, Chinese, Korean, Spanish and Arabic and languages and dialects our ears cannot discern,
Help us to love and respect and protect and welcome them all.
O God of the child prodigy and child prostitute, of the child of rapture and the child of rape,
Of run or thrown away and sexually trafficked children who struggle every day without parent or place or friend or future, and of LGBT+ children struggling to be who they are,
Help us to love and respect and protect and welcome them all.

O God of children who can walk and talk and hear and see and sing and dance and jump and play and of children who wish they could but can’t
Of children who are loved and unloved, wanted and unwanted,
Help us to love and respect and protect and welcome them all.

O God of incarcerated, beggar, beaten, abused, orphaned, neglected, homeless, AIDS, drug, vioence, and hunger-ravaged children and children torn from parents and caged in strange lands,
Of emotionally and physically and mentally fragile children, and children who rebel and ridicule, torment and taunt,
Help us to love and respect and protect and welcome them all.

O God of children of destiny and of despair, ravaged by the wars and ideologies and political agendas of adults,
Of children fleeing crime and drug cartels and gang violence, and life threatening poverty
Of disfigured, diseased, and dying children
Of children without hope and of children with hope to spare and to share,
Help us to love and respect and protect and welcome them all.

Thank you again for planning to join the 2018 National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths as we seek to love, respect, protect, and welcome all children. And please share with us how your place of worship plans to join in this celebration, emailing your description to Rev. Shannon Daley-Harris, CDF’s Senior Religious Advisor, at SDaleyHarris@childrensdefense.org.

In hope, faith, and determination,

Marian Wright Edelman
Welcome to the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths® Celebration

Welcome to the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths manual. Whether this is your 27th celebration or your first, we are so grateful that you are a part of this multifaith effort. You make a difference in the lives of children and in the life of your place of worship—by connecting the two, you can improve the lives of children in your place of worship, community, and across our nation and bring new inspiration and excitement to your worshipping community. We encourage you to use the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths manual in your planning.

By participating in the multifaith National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths weekend, you are part of a powerful, diverse multifaith voice for children spanning our nation and crossing all lines of income, race, ethnicity, and political party. What unites us is the belief that God calls us to protect children, especially the poorest and most vulnerable, and the conviction that our faith calls us to live out God’s justice and compassion.

This inspiring weekend focuses attention on the urgent plight of children in our nation and calls us to put our faith into action to meet children’s needs through direct service and work for justice. Through the service of worship, educational programs, and activities, you can affirm what your place of worship already does with and for children while challenging members to take new actions and commit to new efforts to meet the needs of children in your community, state, and our nation.

The 2018 National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths title is “Realizing Dr. King’s Vision for Every Child: Lives of Hope, Not Despair.” As Marian Wright Edelman wrote, “What would Dr. King say of our nation today in which more than 13 million children still live in poverty in our rich nation? What would he say of our nation today when families fleeing to us in search of safe haven are instead ripped apart heartlessly? What would he say of our nation that protects the right to bear arms at the expense of children’s right to bear dreams of lives safe from gun violence?

What is the Children’s Sabbath?

The Children’s Sabbath is a weekend that unites places of worship and all faiths across the nation in shared concern for children and common commitment to improving children’s lives and working for justice on their behalf. In that respect, it is bigger and more powerful and more inspiring than the efforts of any one congregation on its own. On the Children’s Sabbath, places of worship have a strong sense of participating in a larger movement for children. Some places of worship plan services, educational sessions and activities for their own place of worship. Others join with one or more places of worship in shared services and activities. In some communities all of the faith communities work together to sponsor a multifaith service to which the entire community is invited. Often, local organizations serving children or working on their behalf join in the planning of these community-wide multifaith Children’s Sabbaths.

A Children’s Sabbath weekend typically has four elements:

1) A service of worship or prayers, during which the divine mandate to nurture and protect children calls us to respond to the needs of children today;

2) Educational programs, during which people of all ages learn more about the needs of children today and the sociopolitical structures that keep children in need, explore the sacred texts, teaching, and traditions that lead us to serve and seek justice for children, and develop specific, active responses to help children;

3) Activities that immediately engage participants in compassionate service to help children and in action to seek justice (such as writing letters to elected officials); and

4) Follow-up actions that use the inspiration, information, and motivation of the Children’s Sabbath weekend to lead individual members and places of worship as a whole into new, effective efforts to improve the lives of children in the congregation, community and nation throughout the year.

The Children’s Sabbath is sponsored by the Children’s Defense Fund, guided by a multifaith advisory committee, and endorsed by hundreds of denominations and religious organizations. The Children’s Defense Fund Leave No Child Behind® mission is to ensure every child a Healthy Start, a Head Start, a Fair Start, a Safe Start and a Moral Start in life and successful passage to adulthood with the help of caring families and communities. CDF provides a strong, effective and independent voice for all the children of America who cannot vote, lobby or speak for themselves. We pay particular attention to the needs of poor children, children of color and those with disabilities. CDF educates the nation about the needs of children and encourages preventive investments before they get sick, drop out of school, get into trouble or suffer family breakdown.

CDF began in 1973 and is a private, nonprofit organization supported by individual donations, foundation, corporate and government grants.
From its inception, CDF has recognized the importance of the faith community's partnership in building a movement to Leave No Child Behind. A nation that lets its children be the poorest citizens has at its heart a spiritual and ethical crisis. Thus, the religious community must help to transform our nation's priorities so that we defend those who are youngest, weakest, poorest, and most vulnerable. For many years CDF has worked to support denominations and religious organizations as they develop and maintain child advocacy campaigns. The National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths celebration was launched in 1992 to coalesce these efforts into a united moral witness for children that crosses all lines of geography, faith tradition, race, and ethnicity.

The Children’s Sabbath observance is guided by a multifaith advisory committee with Muslim, Jewish, Roman Catholic, Protestant, Baha’i, and Sikh members. It is endorsed by more than 200 denominations, faith groups, and religious organizations. If you are interested in having your organization become an official endorser of the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths movement, please email sdaleyharris@childrensdefense.org

The Children’s Sabbath is a mix of joy and sorrow, celebration and sober commitment. To be sure, a Children’s Sabbath exudes the happiness of a wonderful celebration. Children delight in their roles of the day, parents hug children a little tighter, more conscious of the gift that they are, balloons may adorn buildings, children’s artwork may brighten hallways, and child-friendly snacks may replace the usual after-service fare. It is a day that children and families look forward to, and those without children at their side can also appreciate the extra energy and excitement of the event.

At the same time, the Children’s Sabbath is sobering, as the service and activities deepen our understanding of the terrible plight facing millions of children in our country and the injustice that we have left unchallenged. It is painful to think about children who are hungry or homeless, without access to health care, abused or neglected, victims of gun violence, without good quality child care, or denied a place in Head Start. The Children’s Sabbath can be an eye-opening experience. And done properly, the Children’s Sabbath will do more than open eyes to the problems facing children—it also will lift up new ways to help children and families and inspire and motivate people to respond and get involved.

The Children’s Sabbath is an annual event. The National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths weekend is designated for the third weekend of October each year.

Because it is an annual event, places of worship participating for the first time can just “stick a toe in the water” and participate in small, simple ways...although some want to jump in completely right from the start. Others build their participation year by year, adding more elements to their observance. Because it occurs annually, places of worship have the opportunity to evaluate what worked well and what didn’t and improve their plans for the following year.

Most importantly, because the Children’s Sabbath takes place each fall, children look forward to it from year to year, having a consistent experience of their place of worship as community that cares about children and is committed to nurturing and protecting them.
The Children's Sabbath is flexible. While there is a suggested theme each year, places of worship are encouraged to focus on the most urgent problems confronting children and families in their communities. The Children’s Sabbath downloadable resources are chock full of materials from which you can pick and choose those best suited to your places of worship. Most can be used as is, adapted or simply serve as inspiration for you to create your own materials. Materials prepared for one faith tradition may be enriching for another tradition.

And while the suggested date is the third weekend of October, if that date doesn’t work for your place of worship’s calendar, pick a different date that does. What is most important is finding a time to focus on the needs of children and our responsibility to nurture and protect them.

The Children’s Sabbath is a time to...

Celebrate and strengthen existing efforts for children.

The Children’s Sabbath seeks to affirm and celebrate the important work that places of worship are already doing with and for children. The faithful, week-in and week-out efforts of places of worship make an enormous difference in children’s lives, and the Children’s Sabbath seeks to highlight, applaud, and build even greater support for those important, ongoing efforts. Hopefully, by the end of the Children's Sabbath weekend, existing efforts in your place of worship to help children and families will have more visibility, new volunteers, increased resources, and fresh energy.

Discover new opportunities to help children.

The Children's Sabbath provides an opportunity for each place of worship to consider in what new ways they might work—as a body or as individuals—to help children not only in your midst, but in the community and across the nation. Religious leaders, committees and members may discover additional problems confronting children—like poverty, lack of health care, or violence—and come up with new ways to respond to them. This might include starting a new program sponsored by your place of worship. Or it might mean exploring and promoting opportunities for individual members to commit their time, services, or resources. Or it might mean forging a new partnership with another place of worship or community organization to help children. It could mean establishing a new child advocacy committee to guide your work for justice for children.

Pray, study, and reflect.

The Children’s Sabbath is a time to look deeply at what one’s faith tradition says about our responsibility to nurture and protect children. This is done through the worship service—in prayer, readings, songs, and sermon or other aspects of your place of worship’s devotional life. It is also done in educational sessions, whether classes for children and youths or adult forums or inter-generational discussions.

Take action.

The Children’s Sabbath is a time for action that springs from that faithful study and reflection. It is not only a time to pray, but also a time to put prayer into action. It is not only a time to study, but also a time to serve children directly. It is not only a time to sing, but also a time... to speak out to elected leaders and others about the need for justice. So on the Children’s Sabbath weekend, after worship/prayers or at another time, members and leaders should join in hands-on activities to help children as well as engage in working for justice—perhaps writing letters or planning a visit to an elected official.

Commit to new, long-term efforts.

The Children’s Sabbath is intended to inspire new long-term efforts to help children and families. However wonderful the weekend celebrations may be, what matters most is what individuals and places of worship do in the following weeks and months and years to help children. Some places of worship will start new service or advocacy efforts (on their own or in partnership with other places of worship or community organizations), such as an after-school tutoring program or housing a Head Start program or an outreach and enrollment campaign to help uninsured children get health care. Other places of worship will work to encourage individual members to find new ways to volunteer time or resources to help children and change the systems that keep children in need.

Frequently Asked Questions About the Children’s Sabbath

Is the Children’s Sabbath the same thing as Children’s Day, Youth Sunday, Tot Shabbat or Children’s Service?

The Children’s Sabbath shares some aspects of Children’s Day, Youth Sunday, Tot Shabbat, and children’s services, but it is distinct and unique in some vital ways.

Some congregations celebrate June Children’s Day, often to congratulate and celebrate youngsters who have completed Sunday school. Like a Children’s Day, the Children’s Sabbath celebrates the gift of children and has a sense of hopefulness and joy. But the Children’s Sabbath also focuses attention on the urgent problems facing children across our nation and provides a call and support to respond to improve children’s lives. And while Children’s Day is more typically celebrated only in churches, from the start the National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths weekend has been a multifaith movement.

Many congregations have Youth Days when they turn the service over to the young people to plan and lead. Like a Youth Day, on the Children’s Sabbath children and youths often participate in the planning and leadership of the day. But on the Children’s Sabbath, the adults aren’t only the “audience,” because the Children’s Sabbath is an intergenerational event drawing on the leadership and involvement of all ages to convey its message that each of us, no matter our age, has a role to play in nurturing and protecting children and working for justice.

Some places of worship have separate services designed just for children to attend. Like those “children’s services,” or a “Tot Shabbat,” worship on the Children’s Sabbath is intended to be engaging and meaningful to the children who attend. But the Children’s Sabbath is a service for everyone, and it aims to speak to all ages.

I want to get involved in the Children’s Sabbath movement. Where do I start?

Reviewing these Children’s Sabbath resource materials is the first important step in getting involved in the Children’s Sabbath, so you are already on your way!
The next planning steps can be found in the “Planning Your Children’s Sabbath Celebration: Ideas for All Faiths” section of this resource. One of the first decisions you and those who join you in the planning will need to make is whether to plan a Children’s Sabbath just for your place of worship or to join with other faith communities or denominations to plan a multifaith or ecumenical Children’s Sabbath in your community. Either option is a valuable way to participate. You should determine what is right for your place of worship this year.

These Children’s Sabbath resource materials provide planning suggestions, promotion ideas, worship resources, educational resources, activity ideas, and suggestions for building on your Children’s Sabbath to help children throughout the year.

What if my place of worship can’t participate on the designated dates?

Choose an alternate date! While it’s great to celebrate on the same weekend as thousands of other places of worship, what’s most important is to participate in the movement at a time that works for your place of worship.

Which is a better to do, a Children’s Sabbath in my own place of worship or a multifaith, community-wide service?

Both are valuable. A service in your own place of worship communicates that this concern is an integral part of the life of your congregation and makes it easier to plan follow-up efforts. A community-wide service is an exciting experience and expression of the shared concerns and common commitment to children of many faith traditions. They can create new partnerships for effective community efforts to help children. But they can also take a lot more work to plan and generate turn-out!

We just heard about the Children’s Sabbath weekend and don’t have much time left to plan. What can we do?

There are a couple of options. You could schedule your celebration for a later date to allow for more planning time. Or, you could still plan to participate on the third weekend of October, but just start with what is quickest and easiest to do, such as photocopying and distributing one of the bulletin inserts, or including one of the prayers or readings provided in the Children’s Sabbath resource materials. (You might still have time to invite a guest speaker who is engaged in work to improve the lives of children.) Then, you could plan an educational program or activities to serve or seek justice for children to take place in the months and year that follow.

Should we bother participating in the Children’s Sabbath celebration if my place of worship already cares about children?

The Children’s Sabbath is an opportunity to affirm what we already do and at the same time deepen our understanding both of God’s call and the current crises facing children so that we may more fully, persistently, effectively, and faithfully live out that calling not only on the Children’s Sabbath weekend but throughout the year.

There is an extraordinary power in participating in the Children’s Sabbath, knowing that all across the country, in places of worship of many different faiths, we are united in our concern for children and in our commitment to respond.
Examples of Children’s Sabbath Celebrations

What a joy to see the varied ways that places of worship celebrate the Children’s Sabbath! Like our children, each celebration was unique and wonderful in its own way. Read on for inspiration and ideas for how you might celebrate this year.

Please send us an email describing what you are planning for your Children’s Sabbath celebration. We would love to hear about your plans in advance, and then would welcome copies of your sermon, homily, khutbah, bulletin, newsletter, or any other resources from your Children’s Sabbath events afterwards. Please send them to Rev. Shannon Daley-Harris at sdaleyharris@childrensdefense.org.

Brown Chapel AME Church in Columbia, South Carolina, celebrated the 2017 Children’s Sabbath to focus on ending child poverty. They wrote, Brown Chapel AME Church will hold a special worship service on Sunday, October 29, 2017. It will begin with breakfast at 8:00-8:45 a.m. The youth will then break out into workshops for elementary, middle and high schools girls, middle and high school boys and adults for Church School on topic led by lay and community leaders. The youth will be in charge of the morning worship service at 10:00 a.m. The theme for 2017 is “Moving Forward with Hope: Love and Justice for Every Child.” This year the Children’s Sabbath is focusing on ending child poverty. Various vendors will be present from 2:00-4:00 p.m. in the afternoon to include food, fun and educational activities. Members from the Fire Department and Richland County Police Department [will be present] and bags donated from various vendors will be distributed. Socks will be given out to those children in need. ‘Seeding and building a transformative social justice movement requires a deep and strong spiritual base and reaching out and listening to and engaging a wide variety of constituencies who share their deepest hopes, fears, and concerns over time. Movements do not happen overnight,’ said Marian Wright Edelman, President of the Children’s Defense Fund. “Working in partnership with people of faith and people of moral courage in communities across our nation, we will keep planting and nurturing seeds to organize a movement to end immoral, indefensible, and costly child poverty in America as the 50th anniversary of Dr. King’s Poor People’s Campaign approaches in 2018. The Poor People’s Campaign gave birth to CDF’s parent organization, the Washington Research Project, in 1968. I know Dr. King would be calling for a campaign to end child poverty in rich America today when wealth and income gaps between rich and poor are at historic levels. That children are the poorest age group in America is morally indefensible and economically costly and a great threat to our future economic and national security. The 2017 Multi-faith National Observance of Children’s Sabbaths celebration is a vital part of building the transformative movement we need. Together, we can and must move forward with hope to ensure love and justice for every child.’ The members of Brown Chapel believe that the multi-faith weekend seeks to inspire congregations and religious organizations to work on behalf of children through prayer, service, and advocacy throughout the year.”
St. Luke United Methodist Church in Dubuque, Iowa, invited the principal of Prescott Elementary School to deliver the message for their Children’s Sabbath last year, reinforcing the congregation’s on-going partnership with the elementary school. They also incorporated prayers by CDF founder and president Marian Wright Edelman into their worship service.

Last year, Hillcrest Congregational Church UCC in Pleasant Hill, California, celebrated the Children’s Sabbath in worship, with a homily titled “Moving Forward with Hope: Love and Justice for Every Child,” and children participating in the leadership, including reading scripture, greeting, and ushering.

The Episcopal Church of Our Saviour in Placerville, California, celebrated the 2017 Children’s Sabbath with worship services on the theme, “Moving Forward with Hope: Love and Justice for Every Child,” and speakers that included Reverend Christopher Chase, founder of Braid Mission; Stephanie Carlson, Teen Court coordinator; and Juline Aguilar, Foster Care & Resource Families.

First Baptist Church Greenville shared reflections from the children who participated in the leadership of their 2017 Children’s Sabbath, including “It felt fun and cool to lead in worship. I felt like a leader,” “It felt powerful to read and lead the church and worship. And it was nice that people could know who I am since my name was in the bulletin- they could put my name and my face together,” and “It’s important for children to lead worship because God loves the children as much as anyone else and children get a voice from doing this.”

Lenexa United Methodist Church in Lenexa, Kansas, collected a special offering for the “Safe Gatherings protection policy,” an abuse prevention program for adults working with children and youth, to help cover the cost of background checks for the Sunday School teachers. Their 2017 Children’s Sabbath also included a guest speaker from the Sunflower School for which the congregation gathers back-to-school supplies and provides other needed support.

Peace of Christ Catholic Parish, in Rochester NY, wrote on the Children’s Sabbath last year: “Dear Parishioners, Today is World Mission Sunday. Our prayers in the intercessions and our gifts in the 2nd collection help the work of bringing the Gospel to the 4 corners of our globe. Thank you for your care for this special work of the Church on the part of Christ who left it behind for us all! It is also Children’s Sabbath. Each year on this day, we have a ministry minute to apprise us of what current need calls out for our attention in applying the Gospel to our daily life. Shoring up local Child Protective Services has been in the local news lately with the tragic story of little Brook Stagles’ death. We’ll hear more about what we can do from members of our Peace & Justice/Social Ministry committees… [at the] 4:30, 8:00, 11:00 and 5:00 Masses, …9:00 Mass, and …9:45 Mass. Thanks for your attention to this critical need and to the signing of the items requested.”

The Congregational Church of Vergennes, Vermont, wrote to the congregation about their 2017 Children’s Sabbath Service: “This Sunday we will celebrate children by having an intergenerational service together. All ages and stages are invited to stay in worship through our Sunday morning time. Our focus will be on the 23rd Psalm and there will be opportunities to reflect upon that very popular passage and to creatively explore those reflections. Four ‘stations’ better known as tables will be set up in the sanctuary. There will be space for creative writing, space for clay formation, space for making your own prayer beads and a space for drawing/painting. The 23rd Psalm is a reassuring passage of God’s care and protection through all times of living. As we reflect on the passage – a couple of questions might be helpful. Where do you find care and protection? Where do you offer care and protection to others?’

First Presbyterian Church of Dallas celebrated Children’s Sabbath with a “Minute for Mission” highlighting Presbyterian Children’s Home, distributing the devotional guide in advance, and a display of how the congregation supports children and youths in the congregation and community with information for how members could get involved.

St. Paul’s Episcopal Church in Atlanta featured the leadership of children and youths in their Children’s Sabbath. A young person preached the sermon, and the many musical gifts of children and youths were featured throughout. St. Paul’s includes a service project following the Children’s Sabbath every year.

First United Methodist Church of McKinney, TX, focused on domestic violence in their Children’s Sabbath, and shared information about community resources to turn to for child abuse, trafficking, and other concerns.

The Unitarian Universalist Congregation in Atlanta helped spread the word about the Children’s Sabbath event planned by Big Bethel AME in Atlanta which included an Informational Forum focusing on issues facing families in an election year.

Congregation Rodeph Shalom hosted Philadelphia’s multi-faith Children’s Sabbath celebration in 2016. The multi-faith, community-wide service, Philadelphia’s 23rd Children’s Sabbath, featured a keynote address from Kevin Johnson, President and CEO of Opportunities Industrialization Center, and music by the Keystone and New Jersey Boychoirs, Pennsylvania and Garden State Girlchoirs, and the Youth and Children’s Choir of the Church of Jesus Christ and Latter-Day Saints.

Grace University Lutheran Church in Minneapolis, MN, highlighted the Children’s Sabbath theme at the top of the bulletin. Children sang and provided other forms of leadership throughout the service. During the time of prayer, the bulletin noted, “We sing the names of all the children at Grace ages 18 and younger – and pray for children throughout the world.” The sung response was “peace be yours” with the refrain, “For all children near and far, we pray to you, O God. Bless the children ev’rywhere, they are precious in your sight.” During the week after the Children’s Sabbath, the Lutheran Campus Ministry hosted a forum, “Faith, Politics, and Finding Common Ground” featuring two state senators—one a Democrat, one a Republican, both Lutheran—sharing how “faith informs their vocation as an elected official” followed by a conversation about “what shared values inform their work together.”

The Congregational Church of Belmont in Belmont, California, held a Children’s Sabbath service in which the children lit altar candles, served as greeters, sang and led throughout the service. Instead of a traditional “time with children” in which the pastor interactively addresses young ones, they had a “time with adults” in which a young person engaged the adults. Then, the traditional sermon was given by another youth.
Highland Baptist Church in Louisville, Kentucky, incorporated special music, readings, and a sermon focused on the Children’s Sabbath theme. In their bulletin, they included statistics about the county’s children from Kids Count, writing: “As we ponder today the reality of children living in poverty, statistics for our own county and the realities that children face right here at home are below. Pray for these situations as together we seek wisdom about how we might be part of addressing these concerns.”

Union Church in Berea, Kentucky, printed an excerpt from Marian Wright Edelman’s letter in the Children’s Sabbath materials in its bulletin for “Meditation” before worship. At the end of the bulletin, they included information about the Children’s Sabbath, CDF, and core facts about child poverty. Union Church then used its website to follow up on the Children’s Sabbath with suggestions for prayer and action.

Newport Lutheran Church in Newport, MN, celebrated its Children’s Sabbath in November, and designated the Children’s Defense Fund as the recipient of its mission giving that month.

The Communities of Christ based in Independence, MO, developed worship suggestions and sermon helps for their congregations, posted on the denomination’s website.

Broadway Baptist Church in Louisville, KY, celebrated the Children’s Sabbath again. The tradition has become so meaningful to the congregation’s children that when a child’s family moved out of state, he still wanted to be included and so provided the artwork for the front of the worship bulletin. The pastoral prayer in the Children’s Sabbath service was a “bubble prayer,” described by the Associate Pastor for Youth and Families: “Each reader named a blessing and then blew bubbles as a symbol of sending their blessings towards God. We had children and parents doing the prayer together.”

First United Methodist Church of Park Ridge, IL, celebrated the Children’s Sabbath with leaders from the child advocacy organization ChildServ preaching during the service and speaking at an after-church forum.

Temple Emanuel in Greensboro, NC, marked the Children’s Shabbat with a guest speaker, Sharon L. Contreras, Guilford County Schools’ new superintendent.
